To whom it concerns,

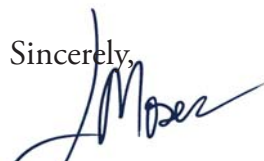

I met Kristen Limam after she moved to our area from out of town, located our company through the Chamber of Commerce website, and contacted me to inquire about any open positions. She wanted to get into marketing. Her initiative was the first of many qualities I discovered in Kristen that made her an excellent member of our team for over two years.

To say she is bright is an understatement. Kristen is an excellent problem solver with the rare ability to see all sides of an issue and devise win-win solutions on the fly. She seeks challenges and learns very quickly. Exhausting all her resources before escalating to her supervisor, Kristen works very independently and sees projects through to completion.

Trustworthy and discrete, punctual and responsive, loyal and hardworking, Kristen is a professional. In the time she was with us, she held a number of increasingly responsible positions as we doubled in size. Ours is a fluid environment, and Kristen showed poise and insight as she calmly adjusted to changes under pressure.

There is one bad thing about Kristen: she doesn't work here anymore. I can't say I would recommend Kristen for every job, but if you have a position for someone with a sense of personal responsibility who can multi-task in a detail-crucial operation, with a minimum of supervision and zero drama, hire Kristen Limam.

I would be happy to discuss my experience with Kristen in greater detail. Please feel free to call or email me.

Sincerely,
